

BUSINESS

All in the family

Can the Molson Coors boss avoid a hangover? Interview, page 7

A new Saga

Now it's been bought it just might go buying page 9

THE SUNDAY TIMES

www.sunday-times.co.uk/business

SEPTEMBER 11, 2005

Alan Weller

Underwear sale ... Myla, the upmarket chain of lingerie boutiques founded by Charlotte Semler and Nina Hampson, above, has sold a controlling stake to investors including the brothers Daniel and Leo Gestetner and Guy Naggar, chairman of Dawnay Day, the advisory firm. In return for a 'multi-million-pound' injection, the new investors now control more than 90% of the company, which has four stores in London. Hampson and Semler will stay with Myla, which they launched in 2000.